

Scott Wolf - Biography

Guitarist Scott Wolf is being widely recognized for his versatility as a performer, teacher, and arranger for classical guitar. Scott most recently received his Doctor of Musical Arts from the University of Southern California, where he studied classical guitar with renowned pedagogue and Los Angeles Guitar Quartet member Scott Tennant. He earned a Master of Music from New England Conservatory under the tutelage of Eliot Fisk and received his Bachelor of Arts at UC San Diego with Dr. Randy Pile.

A frequent competition prizewinner, Scott won first prize in the Donald Miller Concerto Competition in 2009 and was awarded the "Latin American Prize" at Boston GuitarFest 2007 for his fiery interpretation of Latin American and Spanish music. Shortly thereafter, he released a solo album of Latin-American music entitled Un Viaje al Sur (A Journey South). He also studied flamenco guitar extensively in Spain and in the U.S. with Grisha Goryachev and Adam Del Monte. He has since been a guest instructor of flamenco guitar at the Guitar Foundation of America Regional Symposium and the Loyola Marymount International Guitar Festival.

Scott has performed in numerous public master classes for such renowned pedagogues as Pepe Romero, Roland Dyens, Adam Holzman, Rene Izquierdo, Joaquin Clerch, Nicholas Golussus, Carlo Marchione, Paul O'Dette, Alexander Dunn, Eduardo Fernandez, Gerd Wuestemann, and Flavio Cucci. He has also served as assistant to the director at both the Guitar Foundation of America in La Jolla, and the Boston GuitarFest.

A dedicated teacher, Scott serves on the faculties of both Palomar and Whittier colleges. Devoted to expanding the repertoire for the guitar, Scott performs many of his own arrangements solo and with various ensembles in the Southern California area. He has publications available from Clear Note and Doberman-Yppan Publishers, as well as his latest arrangement: Escenas - Five Cuban Dances by Ignacio Cervantes, which is available for purchase at his concerts and via his website.
